

Green Man Gaming included in “Financial Times (FT) 1000: Europe's Fastest Growing Companies”

London, UK, 06 April 2018 - We are pleased to announce that Green Man Gaming has been selected as one of Europe's fastest growing companies by the Financial Times. Green Man Gaming is listed alongside the continent's most exciting companies in the FT 1000: 'Europe's Fastest Growing Companies' 2018 ranking, published today.

Green Man Gaming's inclusion in this prestigious list reflects the company's continued fast growth. We now serve 4.5 million customers in 195 countries and work with 670 publishing houses and 17 development studios, offering games for 13 different PC platforms and two consoles. Our partnership with Intel, as well as the growing vibrancy of our online community, are further demonstrations of the momentum in the business.

The Financial Times, in conjunction with Statista, a leading provider of market and consumer data, have identified the top 1,000 fastest growing companies in Europe that they consider to be the driving force of the European economy. The Financial Times will publish a Special Report on its ranking on 30th April, while the full FT 1000 list is available to view from today, 6th April, on the Financial Times website.

Paul Sulyok, CEO and Founder of Green Man Gaming, said:

“We're incredibly proud to have been identified by the Financial Times as one of the fastest growing companies in Europe. Gaming is growing more quickly than any other entertainment sector in the world, and Green Man Gaming is right at its heart. We have become a global platform that opens the door to a million virtual worlds, giving people the chance to buy, discuss, promote and publish games all in one place. This is a great achievement for us and is testament to the hard work and dedication of all the team at Green Man Gaming.”
